

Erosion Control

Leaving stream banks as natural as possible, with trees, shrubs, wildflowers, mosses and ferns prevents erosion.

Healthy trout and salmon spawning habitat has a small pebbly stream bottom, rather than a sediment filled bottom.

Plant buffers help keep streams clear of sediment and help keep the water clean.

Shared Streams is a national riparian conservation program of the American Forest Foundation